THE SISTERS' STORIES

Beneath the sea, the Sea Queen gathers her six daughters to celebrate a sacred moment: her youngest child, the Little Mermaid, has turned fifteen. Now, for the first time, she may rise to the surface. As the sisters recall their own first journeys above, filled with wonder, longing, and glimpses of a world they can never fully know, the Little Mermaid listens with wide-eyed hope. With her mother's blessing, she swims toward the unknown.

ACT 1, SCENE 3: THE 15TH BIRTHDAY BALL

Back under the sea, the Little Mermaid confesses her love for the prince and the sorrow in her heart. The Sea Queen tells her of the human soul: unlike mermaids, who dissolve into sea foam when they die, humans live on. The only way for a mermaid to gain a soul is to be loved truly by a human. At the royal ball held in her honor, as sea creatures dance and celebrate her coming-of-age, the Little Mermaid slips away in silence.

ACT 2, SCENE 1: THE TRANSFORMATION

At dawn, the Little Mermaid drinks the potion and collapses on the beach, her voice gone, her tail now legs. The transformation is agony. The prince finds her there, silent, mysterious, and strangely familiar. He brings her to his palace.

ACT 2, SCENE 2: THE KINGDOM

In the royal court, the silent girl is welcomed with curiosity and kindness. Though she cannot speak, the prince is drawn to her grace, her quiet joy, and something he cannot name. As days pass, they share gentle moments – a glance, a dance, a closeness that begins to feel like love. Hope blooms in her heart. But just as it seems he might choose her, the Queen declares that he must marry Princess Marisol, the one he believes saved his life. Bound by duty and gratitude, the prince agrees. The Little Mermaid stands among the celebration, silent and unseen, as her heart quietly breaks. She has given up her voice, her family, and her world for a love that will never be returned.

ACT 2, SCENE 3: SEA FOAM

At dawn, the Little Mermaid walks to the sea – silent, steady, and full of grace. She has given everything: her voice, her family, her home... all for love. As the waves rise, her body dissolves into sea foam. But this is not the end. In her sacrifice, she becomes something greater. Not lost, but transformed – a soul born not from being loved, but from loving fully. She rises with the wind, light and free, her story carried in the tide.
